Uncle Custard said in Brain Dmg Mag, that a mastery of diverse languages is required.

Has anybody studying the enigma over the last 11 years been considered a master of diverse languages? (Im assuming at least as many languages used in TDB booklet.) Maybe we need people who speak these languages to help us. Me and nina were talking about this. It might be neat to translate the lyrics into the corresponding page number languages.

He could also simply be pointing us to the page numbers, the numbers only. He also mentioned something about an "anomaly within the paradox of TDB" is this "anomaly" in the page numbers? 11 and/or 17? or even Cluster One?

par·a·dox (P) Pronunciation Key (pr-dks)
n.

A seemingly contradictory statement that may nonetheless be true: the paradox that standing is more tiring than walking.

One exhibiting inexplicable or contradictory aspects: "The silence of midnight, to speak truly, though apparently a paradox, rung in my ears" (Mary Shelley).

An assertion that is essentially self-contradictory, though based on a valid deduction from acceptable premises.

A statement contrary to received opinion.

How about a contradiction?

con·tra·dic·tion (P) Pronunciation Key (kntr-dkshn)
n.

The act of contradicting.

The state of being contradicted.

A denial.

Inconsistency; discrepancy.

Something that contains contradictory elements. *****

contradiction

n 1: opposition between two conflicting forces or ideas 2: (logic) a statement that is necessarily false; "the statement `he is brave and he is not brave' is a contradiction" [syn: contradiction in terms] 3: the speech act of contradicting someone; "he spoke as if he thought his claims were immune to contradiction"

Two conflicting forces, POLES APART. Could we consider ELF ELF a contradiction seeing the page numbers faced away from each other? where else can we find a contradiction?

Please understand, I am sharing every thought, and at the same time using this thread to log these thoughts.

when you have an argument or a dispute with your partner. Not much communication, lots of noise, but still a relation between two emitters/transmitters...

Hence the paradox of the silent "Talking Heads" about which we're making so much noise...

Not going to be able to get that guy I work with to translate some stuff. He teaches at Middle Tennessee State University as well as the sylvan learning center i teach at, but he said he is swamped getting ready for the fall semester right now and really wouldn't have time to do it. AND I wont be able to talk to him for at least a month after my surgrey.

But I imagine we could email some TA's at ANY university, try to intrigue them with the enigma, and see if they'll jump on board.

It's kinda hard to do that because you come off sounding crazy and annoying though! also I bet WE could do it with the help of the internet.

patience is a virtue all too hard to keep though.

denial

I know when you're in a state of denial your life tends to get out of hand.

My personal life experience to help what I mean about denial:

I have a disease but played it off like it didn't bother me. Doctors told me not to smoke, but I did anyways, because ultimately I didn't care if I died.

I denied their advice, I denied my own feelings of guilt/shame/sadness for so long. I turned to pot/video games/junk food/internet/alcohol/pain killers for an escape.

I convinced myself I wasn't using them as an escape but just for "recreation". I was in denial.

My house was a disater area, I hardly took care of my hygeine, my car was a trash can, my relationship with my girlfriend was rocky, I was pissing my bandmembers/best friends off, i was worrying my family to death.

And now realizing just how much denial I was in, it is going to be a very hard attempt to try and make it all better. Cleaning the house, working on our relationship, going to the freakin dentist for christ's sake!

The shit just keeps piling up like bricks in the wall. Before you know it you're trapped in your own wall of paranoia, wanting to be alone, depression, nobody understands me, poor poor me, wah wah wah. And the worms eat into your brain. "slow suicide's no way to go"(Mad Season song "wake up") Denial. very real. very scary.

we hate people that contradict themselves. why?

we cant trust them ever again? poor John Kerry slipped up and contradicted himself which basically lost the election for him. At least he manned the fuck up, knew he was wrong in the past and tried to better himself for the sake of others. OK so Bush never contradicted himself. Does that make him the better person for the job? He CAN'T admit that he (and his advisors, intelligent sources etc.)might be wrong and is afraid to simply say oops! our bad! I guess we were wrong. we were just a tad paranoid he he.

I can understand not wanting to admit they were wrong though because man the masses would probably crucify them!

Most people hate contradictions but they love oxymorons. it's "cute" for some reason.

Pink Floyd maybe contradicted themselves by "selling out" to major record labels. Hardcore fans back in Pink Floyd's earlier days probably hated them for doing it. Hippies aren't too cool with people making lots and lots of money.

But Pink Floyd never yearned for the spotlight even after making it "HUGE", even now. They are truly wise and humble men.
